From the President...

As we review our accomplishments, I am honored and humbled to be associated with this great organization doing such meaningful and important work around the state.

Those who know me know that my family benefitted from a family serving organization, and that it had an immense impact on us. The organization helped us navigate the ever changing waters of the IEP process. As I engage with Family Connection on the board level, I often wonder what our experience would have been like if we had been in South Carolina and had access to Family Connection’s services. For many families, Family Connection has become a one-stop shop for those who have just received a new diagnosis. More importantly, the organization is blessed with empathetic employees and volunteers to complement the reach of its family-serving programs.

Family Connection was built on the idea of parent-to-parent support; now, I can confidently say that in addition to the crucial linking of families, the organization ensures that those in our state have access to information, resources, advocacy and support needed to help their children reach their full potential.

Our board remains committed to preserving the longevity of Family Connection so that even more families can receive the support and direction needed to lead fruitful lives in our home state.

If you would like to be more involved or lend your support in a specific area, please do not hesitate to contact me or any staff member. Together, we can continue the important work of changing lives for those with disabilities or special healthcare needs.

Dear Friends,

As I reflect on the accomplishments of our team, I am reminded of the Dr. Seuss children’s book titled, “Oh the Places You’ll Go!” I have often given the book as a graduation gift to celebrate the excitement of embarking on a new adventure, taking on new challenges, the importance of believing in yourself, and perseverance. I wonder if our founding mothers realized their vision of a place where parents could connect with other parents for support, would result in nearly 30 years of supporting more that 65,000 families of children with disabilities. That’s an accomplishment! As the terrain that families must navigate for their children with disabilities changes, Family Connection continues to grow to meet the expressed needs of our families and their children.

In 2015, Family Connection took on a new challenge to become the Parent Training and Information Center for South Carolina, a designation by the U.S. Department of Education. There is a Parent Training and Information Center in every state designed to meet the information and training needs of parents of infants, toddlers, children and youth with disabilities, ages birth through 26. With this new opportunity, Family Connection has expanded services to further assist parents and families in navigating systems that provide healthcare, early intervention, special education, general education, and postsecondary options for their children. We provide family support programs to help families understand the nature of their children’s disabilities, and expand a parent’s knowledge of evidence-based education practices to help their child succeed to their fullest potential.

This year, we have added full-time staff, and five bilingual staff, across the state to provide peer support, education, training and outreach. We have centralized our intake and referral system by introducing our Family Information Center. Highly trained, professional parents staff our Family Information Center providing information, support, education and referrals to meet the individualized needs of the caller. Our staff is ready to help parents navigate the stages of their journeys and help them chart a true course for success.

With the climate of uncertainty for our families regarding healthcare coverage or education reform, more families continue to call for support and guidance. With the continued support of our many funders, partners and supporters, we remain committed to meeting the growing needs of those with disabilities statewide and helping them live life to their fullest potential.

Warm Regards,

Amy Holbert, Executive Director

We offer a variety of programs and services that allow families with shared experiences to support each other.

Several major programs provide parent-to-parent support, aim to increase knowledge, help families navigate the healthcare and education systems, and provide training for families and the professionals who serve them. Services range from one-on-one telephone support to evidence based parenting programs with home visitation.

Asthma is the leading cause of children being seen in emergency rooms, as well as the reason children miss school and parents are absent from work. Uncontrolled asthma makes many typical, everyday activities very difficult for children.

Our Project Breathe Easy Program helps parents and children learn about asthma, what triggers it, how to prevent an asthma attack and what to do when an attack happens. Our staff visit families in their homes, assessing the environments for potential triggers, teaching the correct way to take medications, and explaining which medications should be taken when.

Project Breathe Easy is managed by a Certified Asthma Educator and staff receives the most accurate and up-to-date information on asthma management. Our Asthma Parent Navigators provided home visits to more than 650 families last year. In one month alone, we saw a record 100 referrals.

Children with uncontrolled asthma who were unable to play sports were able to gain control of their asthma and return to the football field. Others have drastically reduced the number of days they missed from school, allowing them to spend more time in the classroom, learning on grade level instead of falling behind as in previous years.

Specific ways we help
- Families get environmental assessments of their homes and practical advice on removing asthma triggers.
- Every child with asthma gets free dust-mite barrier mattress and pillow encasements.
- Children with asthma are taught to use inhalers correctly so the medicine gets into the lower airways.
- Children without a doctor are referred to a medical home and care is coordinated with the school and the school nurse.
- Families are provided with fun learning activities, including bounce house parties, free golf lessons, pizza parties and asthma camps.

Navigating the education system for children with special healthcare needs or disabilities can be challenging. As our state’s Parent Training and Information Center (PTI), through the Office of Special Education and Information for Parents and Children of Disabilities, our goal is to help increase the knowledge and skills of parents, young adults and professionals. We work to help parents navigate systems from early intervention to postsecondary options, and support parents as they develop challenging expectations for their child’s life goals.

Our trained Education Partners help:

- Obtain appropriate education and services for children with disabilities.
- Work to improve education results for all children.
- Facilitate partnership between home and school.
- Help explore options for resolving disputes in the most positive way.
- Attend school meetings.
- Connect families to community resources that meet their needs.

“I used the resources I learned from my Education Partner to write our Director of Special Education asking for a re-evaluation, what additional resources could be provided for my son, and help him interact with his classmates.”

- A parent from the Greenville County School District

Evidence Based Parenting Programs

Stepping Stones Triple P
Stepping Stones is based on Triple P’s Positive Parenting strategies. It provides a toolbox of ideas that can be personalized to help parents manage challenging behaviors and developmental issues.

Evidence shows that this program provides interventions that help parents feel more confident, less stressed, less angry and less depressed.

Family Foundations

Autism Parent Navigators
The Autism Parent Navigator Program provides important insights and skills for parents of recently diagnosed children. This six session, in-home program aims to strengthen family relationships, improve communication and increase knowledge of community resources.

The program equips families to take an active role in working toward a nurturing and supportive relationship with their children.
Ensuring that parents have the skills and knowledge to help their children reach their fullest potential is a priority for Family Connection. By providing a variety of conferences, workshops and webinars each year, we work to give parents, caregivers, youth and professionals the knowledge needed to be the best advocates possible for our children.

The two-day conference featured keynote speaker Pete Wright of Wrightslaw, allowing those attending to learn the specifics of a child’s rights and answers to a variety of questions on navigating the education system. Registration included copies of his three books, and parents were able to attend thanks to scholarships made possible through the support of partners. Spanish interpreters were on hand to make this accessible to our Latino families.

John Payne, Director of Special Education at the South Carolina Department of Education, Office of Special Education, and Kimberly Tissot, Executive Director of ABLE South Carolina, received Family Connection’s Pat Head Advocacy Award for their work to promote inclusion, raise expectations and advocate for our children to have access to education, post-secondary opportunities, independent living and employment.

The second day of the conference featured breakout sessions on topics related to new diagnosis, early intervention, education, advocacy, and mental and behavioral health.

Conference evaluations showed that attendees were highly satisfied, and specifically:

- 96% Felt the conference met their overall goal
- 97% Agreed that the conference was relevant to their needs
- 94% Agreed that the information received is useful in their daily life
LOOK! Forward
Photography Exhibit

In April 2017, we premiered the LOOK! Forward photography exhibit in the Midlands areas for the first time. The opening event and silent auction replaced our annual gala, but provided a meaningful way to emphasize the purpose of the work of Family Connection every day.

The exhibit, on display in Downtown Columbia for a full month, provided a glimpse into the lives of 50 individuals from our community, each living full, rich lives despite special healthcare needs or disabilities. Photos showed children and young adults on playgrounds, riding bikes, in karate classes and at work. A special preview for the participants and their families was held a week before the exhibit, where they were recognized and celebrated for their accomplishments.

The project was made possible through the generosity of 27 Midlands area photographers, a value of more than $40,000 in donated services.
This year, 2,041 people gathered in support of more than 92 special buddies with Down syndrome for the 18th annual Columbia Buddy Walk at Saluda Shoals Park during National Down Syndrome Awareness Month.

This is a day to celebrate the abilities of those with Down syndrome, promoting acceptance and inclusion. As of November 1, online fundraising – led by the families of those special buddies – had topped the $50,000 goal and reached $68,000.

In 2017, we introduced an easy way for teams and everyone in the community to get involved in Buddy Walk. A paper star campaign (Blue for $1 and Gold for $5) helped raise awareness of how those with Down syndrome rock their extra chromosome. We know that ALL individuals with disabilities and those who support them ARE truly rock stars, every single day.
Promoting Inclusion...

Advocacy

Everything we do at Family Connection is focused on ensuring that parents and those with disabilities or special healthcare needs have the information and support needed to effectively advocate for themselves. Our work with parents hopefully results in giving them the tools to help their children reach their fullest potential – and to speak for themselves.

One significant example was the successful passage of the Diplomas Pathways Bill in 2017. The legislation provides for the development of a uniform employability credential for students with an Individualized Education Plan (IEP).

Parent Leadership

A key effort of Family Connection is providing the Family Voice in policies that affect children and families, ensuring that those who are impacted are able to be heard. Each year, we train parents and young people to collaborate with community leaders and serve on committee efforts to provide input on the local, state and federal levels.

Volunteers Lend a Hand

Family Connection relies on its many volunteers to help us leverage the public, grant and private funds we receive to best serve families of children with disabilities and special needs throughout South Carolina.

From helping at events and conferences to office tasks such as stuffing envelopes and conference packets, 192 volunteers contributed more than 950 hours since August 2016 - a value of $11,400.

Another 504 volunteer Support Parents provide support throughout the year to families, sharing their own personal experiences to provide hope and encouragement to parents facing first-time or new challenges.
Once Upon a Dream

In May, Family Connection made dreams come true for those with special healthcare needs, hosting a spectacular Come Dream With Me Prom in Anderson complete with a red carpet, entertainment and refreshments. Special thanks to The Mill Church and Greenville Health System’s Children’s Hospital, the presenting sponsors of the 2017 event, along with many other donors, volunteers and families who made the night possible for more than 500 who attended.

Holiday Events for Families

The holiday season adds stress to every family, but those juggling medical challenges, multiple therapy appointments and more could certainly use a little extra holiday cheer. Our team in each area of the state works with sponsors and community organizations to provide opportunities for the families we serve to gather at special events. The families are able to enjoy refreshments, fun activities and visits with Santa in a suitable environment. Nearly 1,000 people attended holiday parties in December 2016.

Total Eclipse Tailgate

Thanks to Modern Woodmen of America and the efforts of Ted Hewitt, the families we serve were able to be a part of history and gather at the Touchdown Zone near the University of South Carolina’s Williams Brice Stadium on August 21. Those attending were able to view and learn about the total eclipse with science educators while enjoying refreshments.
Family Connection 5Ks in Columbia and Anderson

In partnership with Ainsley's Angels of South Carolina, those who cannot complete a 5K on their own are able to experience the thrill of crossing the finish line as angel rider athletes. The events encourage and promote active lifestyles for everyone.

Kid Connection

Having a child with a disability significantly affects everyone in the family, including brothers and sisters. The Kids Connection program - a sibling support group, of sorts - allows siblings to enjoy fun activities with peers who understand the advantages and challenges of having brothers or sisters with special needs.
Honoring Pat Head

In 2016, Family Connection established the Pat Head Memorial Advocacy Fund in memory of the longtime volunteer and passionate advocate for the disadvantaged and disabled.

Pat was a parent of a son with Down syndrome who worked tirelessly to expand Medicaid access in South Carolina. She died on January 17, 2016 after surviving a stroke and battling multiple health issues during the last five years.

Pat served as special projects coordinator for Family Connection from 1998 to 2007. She was a graduate of the University of South Carolina with a Master’s Degree in Social Work.

Those who knew Pat will always remember her love for her family, her vivacious personality and her witty sense of humor.
